Cuisinart Snow Cone Maker Recipes are included, but if you want premade syrups you'll need to order them separately while you're getting extra paper cones for serving at your next barbecue. SNOWIE 2 Snow Cone Machine It makes enough ice for a single snow cone in about three seconds and the angled dispensing system lets you fill the snow cone directly and create the familiar domed top with ease. Of course, if you don't want to fill cones, just put a bowl under the chute to collect ice. This uses standard ice cubes, so you don't need to freeze special shapes and it's designed to look at home on your counter, right next to the coffee machine. It also includes eight reusable and dishwasher safe "Snowie Shovel" spoons. This is the second version of this machine, and users have noted that it is definitely an improved model. Hawaiian Shaved Ice Shaved Ice and Snow Cone Machine Party Package It includes three, 16ounce bottles of shaved ice syrup cherry, grape and blue raspberry that the manufacturer says is the same brand used at many shaved ice stands, so you'll have the authentic flavor at home. It also includes 25 plastic spoon straws, 25 paper snow cone cups and three pourers for the bottles that make serving easy. By pressing harder or easier, the texture of the shaved ice changes, so it might take some practice to figure out exactly what texture you prefer.

Each puck makes about two cones, so it's advised to make the pucks in advance and store them in a ziptop plastic bag in the freezer, so you'll have enough on hand for a party or a snow cone emergency. Since the containers don't have lids, they can't be stacked in the freezer and you need to place them where they won't tip. This machine can also use standard ice cubes, but the finished quality won't be quite as good. Nostalgia Snow Cone Maker The machine uses standard ice cubes and turns on when the lid is locked in place, which makes it very safe to operate. Each ice refill makes enough shaved ice for about three snow cones in about 30 seconds, so no one will be waiting long for their treats. An upgraded kit is available that includes spoon straws, paper cups, two flavorings and a squeeze bottle. Time for Treats Manual Snow Cone Maker The molds are stackable and the lids keep them from spilling in the freezer, so you won't make a mess if you bump them while reaching for the frozen peas. For big parties, make the ice ahead of time and freeze it in ziptop plastic bags. ZENY Electric Stainless Steel Snow Cone Maker It can also shave enough ice to make margaritas, slushies, and more for a crowd. Its super speedy and efficient, producing 143 pounds of shaved ice per hour. Though rated for commercial use, its great for inhome use as well. One complaint is that the bowl is on the smaller side, meaning messy overflow at times. Nostalgia Retro Snow Cone Maker Feed regular ice cubes into the chopper, and stainless steel blades will turn them into frozen fluff fit for sweet treats. Though the chopper doesn't hold much ice meaning you'll have to continuously feed it, the tank has a 160-ounce capacity—enough for 20 8-ounce snow cones. Thanks to a safety switch, this maker is not only fun for kids but also safe. Like the other Nostalgia product on this list, the side shelf holds two snow cones, making it easy to add fun designs with syrups.

Others call out this machine's speed and durability. One user says they "served 150 kids 4 days a week very quickly" with this gadget. Another attests they "had about 25 kids wanting SnoCones and no one had an unreasonable wait." Users also appreciate that this machine doesn't require a special ice, just regular ice cubes. "It's great that it can take any ice and no need for special ice blocks or waiting around for the freezer to create more ice, you can simply throw in more ice cubes or buy a bag of ice to use with this." As one reviewer concludes, this snowcone maker creates "lots of fluffy ice in no time at all." Users also appreciate that it comes with ice molds to make the process even more simple.

"If you use the molds that are made specifically for this machine which are sold with the machine, you will have no trouble getting perfectly snowlike shaved ice," one writes. And with the ice this machine churns out, reviewers have made everything from snow cones to margaritas to homemade Frappuccinos, and many appreciate the nostalgia this machine also whips up. "I grew up with on just like this for making halo halo a Filipino summer dessert and was craving some when the weather here hit the 90s," one writes. One reviewer — in a post titled "Would recommend to all pregnant people living in hot climates" — said this was "heavenly" for "eating bowls of plain shaved ice." One supportive spouse bought this for his pregnant wife who he thought would "break a tooth trying to bite into a big chunk of ice" during her pregnancy. "She absolutely loved it. She used it every day." Beyond pregnancy, one user says you'll get continued use out of this machine. "I bought it because I was 9 months pregnant and had no air conditioning. The next summer my son used it to make literally THOUSANDS of snow cones to raise money for our local police department's K9 unit. It handled all of it without even slowing down, and two years later we still use it all summer long." The electric operation is also easy to use. As one reviewer notes, "I should have thought about buying one of these sooner, it's the perfect treat on a hot day. One explains, "The trick is to use just enough pressure for the ice to shave. It does not take much and you do not need to be Hercules. Let the machine do the work." This snowcone machine also comes with ice molds and flavor syrups which users really appreciate. "The syrups that come with the party package are twice the size of the bottles you get at the nearby Bed and Bath store. Another says, "My 6-year-old son operates this with ease without supervision.

That said, the folks in the hotel room next you might wonder what you're doing because the machine is not exactly quiet it's cutting ICE for Pete's sake!" Another user says this machine produces "light and fluffy ice for Hawaiian shave ice." Dozens of users believe it is the adjustable blade that makes this product so great. As one explains, "You can adjust the angle of the blade to change the consistency of the ice." Another writes, "Love how the Great Northern produces ice that can be as fine as you want it versus as thick as you want it." Many users note that this is a heavyduty machine that doesn't come with a shield, so they warn about using it near children. "Kids will be drawn to this machine, but it's no toy. Like I said, it's basically a drill press. The press has sharp barbs that hold the ice, and there's a blade that cuts the ice. And ice can fling off in chunks. Keep little hands away from the machine," one reviewer writes. With safety precautions in place however, reviewers still have a lot of fun using this machine. "Once you get the hang of adjusting the blade height, you'll be making professional quality shaved ice in no time!" Another reviewer calls it "a substantial machine," while another appreciates its "heavyduty build." One reviewer even compares it to the kind used in a restaurant "This shaved ice machine produces almost snow like ice and is currently in my dad's restaurant as a backup in case his commercial machine breaks." They add, "Obviously it won't put out the quantity of ice the commercial machine does, but the quality of the shaved ice is very close." It might not serve a days worth of patrons, but one reviewer, who had "75 kids of all ages over for a party," says "boy, did this deliver!" Another says, "It stood up to 300 employees and runs great." Dozens of reviewers also note that this snowcone machine will last long after any first event as well.

"We have had one for 8 years and it still works perfectly," one says, adding, "It's a hit at every party and the kids really look forward to the snow cones." Reviewers also love the design, which means many just keep these on their counter. One user writes that they "love the design" because it is "reminiscent of the oldfashioned theaterstyle and can fit on a countertop or table." Another says "The tray pulling out is a great bonus for scooping the ice," while another says this machine, "Holds a good amount of shaved ice." Reviewers also call out the safety features. "The machine will not run if the lid is open or the ice tray removed," explains one reviewer. And these highlyreviewed safety features mean adult reviewers feel comfortable letting kids of all ages use this machine. At one reviewer's 4th of July party, "Kids from 4 years old with assistance to 16 years old used it on and off for 4 hours." Not only does this machine hold up but it works fast, according to others. Another reviewer reports it making "over 200 Snow Cones in about a 3hour time period." Reviewers also mention that it does all this while staying relatively quiet "It isn't too obnoxiously loud while it is running."
